A light at the end of the tunnel?

Over the past five days, LVMH shares have accumulated a positive performance of 5%, while Kering has registered a 2% increase, driven by the announcement of a package of measures from China to stimulate the economy. Despite the recent appreciation, market experts highlight that these companies have solid financial fundamentals, which could provide an attractive return for investors in the long term.

According to Bridgewise, an Israeli fintech company specializing in AI-powered investment analysis, brands like L'Oréal and LVMH are part of a "landscape of opportunity" for investors.
